Comes in four flavors blueberry, acai, strawberry, mango

Jolly Llama, a producer of frozen products, has introduced new Squeezable Whole Fruit Sorbets in single-serve tubes. It is said to be all-natural, low in calories, and packed with vitamins and natural fiber.

New offerings are available at grocery retailers across the Western states. The various stores include Whole Foods Stores (California), Oliver's (Sonoma County), Nugget Markets (Sacramento area), New Leaf Markets (Santa Cruz County), Berkeley Bowls (Berkeley), Mother's Markets (Los Angeles), Basha's and Sprouts (Phoenix), and others in Washington and Arizona.

Consumers nationwide can order the four flavors namely blueberry, acai, strawberry, and mango for a suggested retail price of $1.49 for a 3 oz. tube. Jolly Llama uses sustainable recyclable packaging.

The company said that it makes sorbets from whole fruit to retain fiber and nutrients, then sweetens them with cane sugar and fortifies them with vitamins A & C and fiber. Every flavor is reportedly low in fat and calories, gluten-free and does not contain allergens.

Scott Jacobson, president and founder of Jolly Llama's, said: "There's nothing else like them on the market. We use premium ingredients and leave out the bad stuff like genetically-modified corn sweeteners and artificial flavors, so you can feel good about indulging in them."
